New Example Of Why Dual Precincts Should Be Ended

Concision over where to vote Tuesday again demonstrates the awkwardness of having differing precincts and polling places in Granite City. With one set based on the ward system and used for municipal elections, and still another—devised within the township and county structure—followed in general elections, the voter has a hard task. In some instances, he must remember different precinct numbers, boundaries and polis and also keep track of which are in effect on the particular election day.

There is a need for such forums, as indicated by their absence in the election campaign just ended. Biographies and other background information aid in making comparisons, but nothing can duplicate a close-up view of candidates in action, thinking on their feet while being asked how they stand on the issues.
